

Vera Heidolph, DVM

Dr. Vera Heidolph is a small animal veterinarian from a small town, Wiarton, in Ontario. She graduated from Northfield Mount Hermon high school in Northfield, Massachusetts. In her undergraduate degree from Brock University in St. Catharines, Ontario she studied German, French, Spanish and Japanese. She received her Master of International Management degree from Thunderbird (formerly American Graduate School of International Management) in Glendale, Arizona. She worked in investment banking first at Salomon Brothers Frankfurt, then Salomon Brothers New York, followed by Deutsche Bank New York.

To follow her heart, she switched gears and enrolled in pre-vet studies at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, New Jersey. She completed her Doctor of Veterinary Medicine at the Ontario Veterinary College, University of Guelph, followed by a small animal medicine and surgery internship at Red Bank Veterinary Hospital in Red Bank, New Jersey. She lives in San Diego where she has her own mobile veterinary practice – the VetBus. She has volunteered with various animal organizations performing spays and neuters across the U.S.A. and in Tijuana, Mexico for decades. She is happiest in the company of dogs.
